INSIST WPB KEEP CONTROL OVER ECONOMY

Legislators Say They'll Act Unless 'Peace Pact' With Armed Services Holds.

SOME ARE SKEPTICAL

Army Has Club Over Munition Orders Because It Signs All Contracts.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Legislators determined to keep the nation's economy in civilian hands indicated today they will act unless the War Production board's peace pact with the armed services demonstrates that WPB really exercises control over the output of munitions.

Some members privately expressed disappointment over provisions of the agreement as they were reported, scantily, by War Production Director Donald M. Nelson.

But one, Chairman Harry S Truman, (D., Mo.), of the senate war investigating committee, permitted this direct quotation. "I hope it means civilian control."

There was a general impression that the WPB-armed services struggle has not been settled decisively despite attempts by the disputants to create an impression that all is in harmony again. And there was general agreement that the pact was a compromise in which Nelson was compelled to make greater sacrifices than he intended.

He retrieved supervisory powers over the scheduling of all munitions, authority he transferred to the armed services last March but more recently invested in Vice Chairman Charles E. Wilson of New York, former president of General Electric company.

Wilson is charged with the particular duty of central supervision and direction of the production programs of aircraft, radio and detection equipment, and escort vessels which has lagged under supervision by the services. But there are limitations on Wilson's authority conducive of renewed conflict—such as the provision that he exercise his duties through the services' supply and procurement branches.

One of the army's main weapons in holding control over pro-

There Are Two Things to Do on Pearl Harbor Day, Buy Bonds and Fly Flags -- Let All Know That You Remember

Buy bonds Monday and fly the flag at your home or place of business.

This was the latest appeal of the December war bond sales committee, which is aiming at a goal of $100,000 in war bond purchases on Monday, Dec. 7, first anniversary of Pearl Harbor, through outright sales or payroll deduction.

Actually, there's another step the committee is most anxious to have all Mansfielders observe—that's the signing and depositing in boxes provided for the purpose, of the war bond pledges. The pledges must be deposited Monday.

Buy a bond as your own contribution to remembering Pearl Harbor—fly the flag to let everyone at home know you remember, and fill out the pledge card so that the men on the fighting fronts will know you remembered. That's the way the war bond committee puts it.

You know, of course, how word of your bond purchase, either outright or through payroll deduction, is to reach our fighting men. After you have filled out the pledge and deposited it wherever you buy your bond, or in one of the downtown stores, it will be collected and turned over to the News-Journal, where an alphabetical list will be compiled and printed in a special edition on Dec. 13, a week from Sunday, and mailed to all men in the armed services.

You know, too, that the pledge cards will be distributed to every home in Mansfield Sunday, between 7 and 7:30 p. m., when the

Hit Battleship, Two Cruisers In Daring Raid

Rome Admits Severe Damage After U. S. Fortresses Trail Italian Squadron Home In Daylight to Blast Docks At Major Axis Supply Base.

BULLETIN

ALLIED FIELD HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, Dec. 5—Noon—(UP)—Allied troops have withdrawn from Djedeida and Tebourba, front reports revealed today, and now are under terrific German divebomber, tank and infantry attack in positions to the rear of Tebourba.

(By United Press)

American Consolidated B-24 bombers have struck across the Mediterranean, it was revealed today, to bring the war home to southern Italy with a shattering surprise attack on Naples in which an Italian battleship and two cruisers were hit.

Rome admitted that the attack had been severe and that it came as a great surprise, apparently due to the fact that the American planes had trailed an Italian squadron across the Mediterranean and approached Naples without their presence being detected.

Importance of the raid was emphasized by the fact that Naples, Italy's third largest city, is a major supply and reinforcement base for the Axis armies in Africa. With Genoa already half knocked out of commission by British bombers Naples has become even more important to the Axis.

The American attack on south Italy brought to reality the warning by Prime Minister Winston Churchill to Italians that heavy and punishing blows lay in store for them.

Churchill addressing a group of war workers, warned that the war is approaching its most tense period and cautioned against optimism.

"We have to gather all our strength," he said. "If by chance unexpected good tidings come, it will be a matter for rejoicing. But we must not count upon it."

He pointed out that Allied lines have been driven forward 900 miles by the offensive in North Africa but that there are 20 miles yet to cover—an apparent reference to the distance to Bizerte and Tunis from Allied advance positions in Tunisia.

Reports from the African battle front left the actual location of the front fighting lines in some doubt but emphasized the severity of the battling both in the air and on the ground in the Tebourba and Mateur regions.

At Naples, the Italian high command admitted 159 killed, 338 wounded and heavy damage done in the raid in which Allied heavy

SIRENS TO CALL ALL TO DEFENSE POSTS SUNDAY

Curb on Use of Phones Between 7 and 7:30 p. m. Requested by Kalbfleisch.

When air raid sirens sound an alert at 7 p. m. Sunday, they will call all protective units of Mansfield's civilian defense organization to their assigned stations in a test mobilization.

Beginning at that hour "Remember Pearl Harbor and Buy Bonds" pledge cards will be distributed to every residence in the Mansfield area, the all-clear signal being sounded when zone leaders report this task completed.

The 7 p. m. signal will be a typical rising and falling siren scream while the all-clear signal will be a duller drone of the sirens repeated at brief intervals for a three-minute period.

All protective forces will respond at tomorrow night's test mobilization alert, including air wardens, fire watchers, rescue squads, demolition and repair squads, first aid station attendants including representatives of medical and nursing units, and feeding and housing committeemen. Sector posts for wardens and other assembly points for various groups have been designated.

Restricted use of telephones between 7 and 7:30 p. m. will be in force to permit fullest possible telephone service by which sector posts, casualty depots, first aid stations and other assembly points will report personnel strength to the defense control center in City Hall.

These announcements were made today by Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch, defense coordinator, who urged the fullest cooperation of all telephone subscribers, especially party line users in suburban areas of Madison and Mifflin townships, in making prompt reporting pos-

'MISSING' G.O.P. ENDORSEMENT OF JUDGE FOUND

Governor's Secretary Finds Schettler Letter Along With Others For Beam.

The "mystery" of the Richland County Republican executive committee's missing endorsement of H. H. Schettler for Mansfield municipal judge was solved today by Don Power, Gov. John W. Bricker's secretary.

Power, who said he had been on a trip for the past week, told The News-Journal that he found the committee's endorsement in his accumulated mail when he returned to his office this morning.

Gov. Bricker said yesterday that he had not received the endorsement and Powers' secretary said she did not believe it had reached the governor's secretary, although Ralph Hardy, Richland county executive chairman, said the letter was mailed a week or 10 days ago.

Supporting the belief of several Mansfield G. O. P. leaders that Lydon Beam may still have a chance to get the appointment as judge, Power said he had received "a number of letters from individuals in Mansfield in behalf of Beam."

Beam sought the post as soon as Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch was elected common pleas judge, but the G. O. P. group placed its approval on Schettler who frequently has served as acting judge.

Hardy said, however that Power told a member of the executive committee shortly after the November election that it was "up to your county committee to get an endorsement to the governor so he can make the appointment." Hardy added today that the governor "usually follows our endorsements."

Asked today when the governor might act on the endorsement, Power said it "will probably be some time, since there won't be a vacancy for several weeks and there's plenty of time to name someone for the office."

Judge Kalbfleisch will take office as common pleas judge early in February, leaving the municipal post vacant.

Petitions Go Out To Urge City to Remove Snow, Ice

Coincident with petitions being taken out yesterday for city-wide circulation to ask that the city clean sidewalks of snow and ice came a police report that a Marion avenue woman had suffered a painful hip injury in falling on an icy sidewalk on Park avenue west.

Patrolmen Russell Miles and George Yoakam reported that while cruising on Park avenue west they observed Russell McBride of Mack's garage assisting a woman from the sidewalk. Investigation disclosed that the victim of the fall on the ice was Miss Helen Charles, 96 Marion avenue.

The injured woman was taken to her home in the police cruiser and medical attention summoned.

Lyman Lantz, 205 Marion avenue, obtained from City Clerk Robert R. Black yesterday a number of blank petitions which will be circulated throughout the city for signatures of property owners the petitions to be presented to council asking for city crews and equipment for cleaning snow and ice from sidewalks over the city.

KILLS SISTER

Admits She Fired Shot, Blamed Younger Brother.

TOLEDO— (INS)—Eleven year-old Lois Ibbotson admitted today that she accidentally shot and killed her ten year-old sister, Rita, and then blamed it on a seven-year-old brother, Charles Ibbotson, Jr. Juvenile Judge Paul Alexander reported.

Judge Alexander said Lois told this new version of the shooting: Lois took a gun from Charles and was carrying it to another room when the boy shoved her. Lois kicked at her brother and the gun went off, the bullet striking Rita, who was seated on a bed.

Juvenile court attaches said the new version cleared Charles of all suspicion and that Lois would be questioned further.

Mayor's Move Fails to Delay Meeting on War Bond Issue

BULLETIN

The city investment board ordered $100,000 in city funds invested in war bonds today. The issue was voted by three members of the board and Mayor W. J. Locke was absent.

Mayor W. J. Locke today sought to delay an investment board meeting called for 10:30 a. m. by City Auditor Paul L. Kelley, who yesterday said he would recommend purchase of $100,000 worth of government war bonds with idle city money.

Locke sent Mrs. Garnet Boyle, city hall receptionist, to Kelley's down-the-hall office at 10 a. m., with a verbal request for the delay, Mrs. Boyle asserting she lacked time to transcribe into a letter the lengthy shorthand notes purportedly setting forth the mayor's reasons for wanting the delay.

Kelley declared that inasmuch as City Solicitor Leslie K. Wagner was in the building and that Treasurer Earl K. Troll had arranged to be present he could see no reason for a postponement.

Kelley, Wagner and Troll are Democrats. The mayor, a Republican is ex-officio chairman. After accepting the resignation of C. N. Shultz as its representative on the board Tuesday night, a dominantly Republican council failed to name a successor. Today's action by Locke was analyzed as a "safety" play to allow

OPA APPROVES PRICE BOOST

Orders Increase In Milk Rate At Middletown.

CINCINNATI—(AP)—Office of Price Administration ordered the retail price of milk increased in Middletown today from 14 to 15 cents a quart and wholesale charges raised from 12 to 12½ cents.

The OPA said increases were ordered to prevent too great a diversion of milk from Middletown to higher price markets here and in Dayton.

Cincinnati rates to farmers were 55 cents higher per hundredweight than those in Middletown under the old schedule, the OPA estimated, while Middletown distributors would have to take a loss of 45 cents a hundred to meet Dayton prices.

BACKS BRICKER

Taft Will Endorse 'Favorite Son' Candidacy, Says Paper.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—U. S. Senator Robert A. Taft of Cincinnati "will step aside in 1944" and endorse Gov. John W. Bricker as Ohio's favorite son candidate for the Republican presidential nomination the Ohio State Journal said today.

The state's senior senator, twice a favorite son and a leading candidate at the 1940 Republican convention in Philadelphia, will announce his support for Bricker "within the next few days," the newspaper asserted.

Bricker, who begins his third term Jan. 4, is expected to state his willingness to accept the favorite son role shortly after receiving Taft's endorsement, the Journal added.

TRAINS CRASH

One Killed In Railway Wreck In California.

SAN FRANCISCO —(UP)— The Southern Pacific railroad reported today that its crack northbound Lark was struck from the rear by a secondary sister train, the Coaster, derailing seven of the Lark's 20 cars.

One passenger was killed and two porters were injured, a Southern Pacific spokesman said.

HOUT STANDS PAT ON ACTION

Rejects Request From State Defense Chief That He Stay at Post.

Turning down a request from the state office of civilian defense to reconsider his resignation from the chairmanship of the Richland County Council of Defense, Ray Hout said today there was definitely no likelihood of his remaining the post.

"I resigned and I'm out," Hout commented, upon receiving the request from Ralph H. Stone, executive director of the Ohio State Council of Defense. Hout tendered his resignation, effective as of Nov. 30, to county commissioners. The commissioners had not taken official action on the resignation as yet today, C. L. Mitchell, president, said.

In reference to Hout's reasons for resigning the chairmanship, due to the state defense council not recognizing the Civil Air Patrol maintained at the Municipal airport, as vital to defense, Stone said he had not given Hout "a decision that civilian defense funds could not be used for Civil Air Patrol work."

Stone, who had earlier given verbal approval of Hout's $2,000 appropriation for airport improvements, added, however that his office was submitting the appropriation to the attorney general for an opinion. "The expenditure must be ordered by the legal department," Stone said.

Meanwhile, the county commissioners are faced with the responsibility of appointing a successor to Hout as the state civilian defense headquarters today had informed the county defense office that such an appointment rests with the commissioners.

Mitchell indicated that a commissioners' meeting would be called next week to act on Hout's resignation and to consider a successor. The chairmanship carries no financial remuneration.

TWO-WAY: Reds Drive Ahead On Stalingrad, Moscow Fronts

(By International News Service)

MOSCOW—Soviet forces smashed ahead today on the Moscow and Stalingrad battle fronts, capturing additional enemy strong points on an 800-mile front and adding 5,300 dead to the staggering toll of German dead in the twin offensives.

Front line dispatches said that Hitler has lost 12 divisions killed and taken prisoner during 17 days of fighting on the Stalingrad front in addition to two divisions on the central front since the Red army launched its offensive in that sector. The figures did not include wounded.

(Berlin sources reported fighting around Bieber less than 100 miles northeast of the great Nazi concentration base of Smolensk which supplies the vast Moscow battle front, and the Nazi-controlled Vichy radio quoted Stockholm dispatches reporting that the key rail towns of Rzhev, 140 miles northeast of Moscow and Velikie Luki, 150 miles due west of Rzhev, have been completely encircled by the surging Soviet offensives.

Today's noon communique listed an additional 3,200 Nazis slain in four local offensives. The midnight communique accounted for 2,000 enemy dead making a total of more than 12,000 Germans killed in battle during the past four days.

The defenders of Stalingrad hammered at enemy positions within the city while the columns striking north and south of the city made continued progress after occupying a number of fortified villages.

The Soviet drive westward from Rzhev in the general direction of Smolensk continued unchecked despite strong enemy counter at-

BRACED: Yanks Mopping Up In Solomons, Wait New Thrust

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(INS)—The navy announced today that American dive bombers and torpedo planes attacked a small Japanese force of light surface vessels about 150 miles northwest of Guadalcanal, but that results of the assault are not known.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—While U. S. ground troops on Guadalcanal continued to mop up advance Japanese patrols, American sea and air forces today prepared for "round four" of the four-months-old Solomons campaign.

This was intimated by Secretary of the Navy Knox, when he declared that American naval forces are operating on the assumption that the Japanese "will come back as long as they can."

The fact that the Japs have been unable to land reinforcements or supplies for about three weeks led the navy men to assume that the enemy soon would make another desperate attempt to get food and ammunition to his Guadalcanal garrison.

Although Knox at a press conference said that reconnaissance has failed to disclose any huge concentration of Jap ships in the northern Solomons, some sources asserted the next Nipponese thrust might come directly from their huge Pacific base at Truk.

A change in enemy tactics has been anticipated ever since the Japs suffered a crippling sea-air defeat off Guadalcanal Nov. 13-15. This sea borne thrust was launched from bases in the northern Solomons and New Britain.

Naval sources in Washington failed to show signs of elation over the Nov. 30-Dec. 1 night naval victory, presumably because it

A Year of War, at Home, Abroad

Tomorrow brings Mansfield and the United States within 24 hours of the end of a year of war. It has probably been the most momentous year in the history of the city and the nation. And tomorrow the News-Journal brings you, in pictures and stories covering many pages of the Sunday edition, a review of what that year has meant to Mansfielders and Americans.

Starting on page one, you will find the first full official report by the navy department on what happened at Pearl Harbor. It is a comprehensive and startling statement every American will want to read and all America will be talking about for weeks to come. In addition there will be many Pearl Harbor photographs released for the first time by the navy.

* * *

There will also begin a series of factual articles on the lands where American soldiers now are fighting or are stationed near the world's great warfronts. The first article takes you to New Zealand where a large AEF contingent landed this week, and to the Fiji islands where Ohio's 37th division has been officially reported to be stationed.

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

You Meet Interesting People.

(And It's the Little Things That Fascinate You.)

Shirley Temple hasn't succumbed to the gin rummy craze as yet, but she's an expert card player—in fact, for all her honey-colored curls and disarming dimples, she's a wicked adversary with the pasteboards. Her favorite game is blackjack . . . Except for evening dreses, the only thing Dorothy Lamour owns that doesn't have long sleeves is her sarong. Her street frocks, her blouses — even her nighties —have sleeves that end below her wrists . . . Fred Allen walks an average of five miles a day to observe the goings-on of local citizens, as a basis for his timely comedy scripts.

Kilgallen

Luminous-eyed Adelaide Moffett, who once made that annual list of the ten best-dressed women in Africa, is the least clothes-conscious of all the night club canaries. Once in a while she openly revolts against the rules of fashion by wearing street shoes with her evening gowns. . . . It is one of life's lesser ironies that Sue Carol, who dieted religiously when she was a screen star, now finds one of her most important wifely duties is to tempt the lackadaisical appetite of her husband, Alan Ladd, whose studio is constantly fretting because he's underweight. . . . Monty Woolley's smoking consists mainly of putting a fresh, king size cigarette in his long holder, lighting it, then resting it on the edge of an ash-tray to burn without any help from him.

Veronica Lake habitually sports a secret small smile of thoughtful amusement, as though her mind were mulling over something wonderful she'd heard which she knows you'd give anything to learn and which she hasn't the slightest intention of telling you . . . If you'd ask Judith Anderson why she calls one of her pet Dachshunds "Tinker, Too," she'd impart the incredible information that the pup exhibits the same playful mannerisms and kittenish personality as a Siamese cat she once had whose name was Tinker, so she called him Tinker, Too . . .Noel Toy, the Oriental dancer, pens all her letters on flaming red stationary. . . . Norma Shearer has had all the ordinary fillings removed from her molars during the past few months, and has had them replaced with nylon ones. More modern.

George Jessel is passionately fond of poetry, and can (and frequently does) spout A. E. Housman or Walt Whitman by the yard without missing a cadence. In fact, he is a worm for books of any kind. He can quote long passages from the Bible and from Shakespeare; and as soon as any new novel hits the stands, a copy finds its way onto George's bookshelves .. . Of all Martha Raye's accomplishments, the one she seems proudest of and is most likely to demonstrate is her mastery of the scrams on the fortisan art of double-talk—and when she's engaged in this linguistic foolishness, her features take on a seriousness you never see otherwise . . . Virginia Hill, the much-publicized "heiress," owns a fur coat to match every dress in her wardrobe. She even has fox jackets dyed pale pink and baby blue.

Although he never wore glasses before, Eddie Davis of Leon and Eddie's bought a pair last week in the hope that better eyesight would improve his gin rummy technique. But he found to his sorrow that his score wasn't any bigger, even though he could see it better . . . Irving Berlin is a passionate gourmet. He'll travel miles and miles to investigate a restaurant that boasts a famous dish, and he invariably winds up in the kitchen, exchanging recipes and "do you use garlic or tarragon?" with the chef . . . Tommy Dorsey never goes to bed until it gets light out. He just stays up all night and talks or plays cards with anyone he can corral, from a member of the band to the elevator boy at his hotel.

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD — There are Sir Lancelot and the Lion and the Tiger. There are also Attila the Hun, the Duke of Marlborough, and the Lord Beginner. All because there is calypso.

You know what calypso is? I didn't. I knew it was a kind of "native music," but then again I thought it might be a dance or a drink or maybe an old Greek custom. Sir Lancelot, who is here for a movie called "I Walked With a Zombie," set me straight.

Coons

The first guess is right. It's native music, and it comes from Trinidad, the British West Indian island, and nowhere else. That's where Sir Lancelot and his picturesquely titled competitors held forth, jousting with calypso in musical tournaments just as knights of old held tourneys with lance and spear.

"It's organized like knight errantry," says Sir Lancelot "and that's where we get our high-sounding names."

Sir Lancelot is as suave and ingratiating an exponent of the art as he is dark of skin. He doesn't remember when he didn't sing calypso for fun, but he didn't take it up professionally until after he had been graduated from college as a pharmacist. He entered a "tournament" down there and came off with honors and a new career. Gerald Clark, whose calypso orchestra is noted, discovered him and brought him back to New York for a two-week engagement at the Village Vanguard club. The engagement lasted a year. Sir Lancelot did not have to reach for a "high-sounding name." His own is Lancelot Pinard.

Calypso singers were the musical town-criers and gossip columnists of their native land. Calypso has a distinctive rhyahm. It combines a lightness and gaiety from Trinidad's Franco-Spanish past superimposed on a tom-tom beat from African slave days. To be authentic calypso, it must be in rhyme and it must tell a story. The singer's prowess is measured partly by his ingenuity in improvising, to fit any occasion, as he goes along. Try this on your friends some time.

Sir Lancelot's compositions rang in theme from "Pearl Harbor" to "A Walk in Echo Park." and calypso has no limits in subject matter. No matter how sad the theme, however, the rhythm remains gay. There's another type of song for funeral subjects, but even here Sir Lancelot demonstrates that underlying gaiety surges through. "It's our people," he explains. "We are gay by nature."

The word calypso is a corruption of the French "carrousseau" song for a Bacchanalian festival." French is an "out" for harassed singers in search of a quick rhyme. If he's stuck, the singer finds a bit of French patois that fits. It may be meaningless, but the Trinidadian audience is in on the joke and applauds such a deft "escape" as heartily as a solid rhyme.

CURTAIN FALLS ON 15 BILLION RELIEF PROGRAM

WPA, Which Hired 8,000,000, Closing Out Under Order Of President.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — The curtain was coming down today on the greatest government relief program ever undertaken—a program which gave jobs on public works to millions of Americans at a total cost since 1933 of nearly $15,000,000,000.

The Works Projects Administration—lineal descendent of the depression-born Federal Emergency Relief, Civil Works, and Works Progress Administrations—is being liquidated.

President Roosevelt gave the order yesterday in a letter to Federal Works Administrator Philip B. Fleming, whose agency operates WPA. He said war work finally had solved the unemployment problem left over from the depression and brought the country to a point "where a national work relief program is no longer necessary."

In directing its "prompt liquidation," he said all projects in many states would be concluded by Feb. 1 and those in others would be stopped as soon thereafter as feasible.

The order will enable Fleming's agency to conserve a considerable part of the $280,000,000 appropriated by WPA for the current fiscal year. But many projects in which the agency had a hand apparently will be continued.

An FWA spokesman said it was probable that certain "service projects"—nursery schools, hot lunches for school children, industrial training schools, health clinics — would be maintained on some scale by other agencies or by local sponsors. He said FWA itself will be able to operate some with non-WPA funds, but that it was "too early" to say which ones would be preserved.

From 1933 through Dec. 2 of this year according to treasury figures, the family of work relief agencies has spent $14,377,295,826,80.

In the seven years since the first WPA was formed, some 8,000,000 persons, with 30,000,000 dependents, have been the beneficiaries of work relief.

YANKS BRACING FOR NEW THRUST

Mop Up Japs on Guadalcanal, Wait Expected New Attack by Sea

was a small scale enemy attempt to reinforce its troops on Guadalcanal.

The feeling prevailed that this recent thrust might be the forerunner of another major attempt to oust Americans from the southern Solomons. In the past, such stabs preceded full-scale assaults.

While the remaining strength of Japan's badly battered carrier fleet is not known, it must be presumed that the enemy has a number of these vessels in reserve or under repair and that they may be used in the next attack on Guadalcanal.

Should this occur, navy men believe that the enemy will swing east of the Solomons and bear down on Guadalcanal from the northeast as they did late in October when American carrier forces intercepted a Jap armada and sent it reeling back off the Stewart islands.

Tokyo Warns Japs To Expect Stiff Test

NEW YORK — (INS) — A Tokyo radio commentator warned Japanese listeners today that the second year of the war will be a test "to see whether we are prepared or not to meet what is in store for us."

The broadcast, recorded by the FCC and reported to the OWI, declared "we must increase production and furnish required armaments to those at the front."

American air raids on Tokyo and other Japanese cities are to be expected, the commentator asserted, and added: "We must further steel ourselves to meet everything and anything."

FAVORS ISSUING OHIO BEER PERMITS ON POPULATION BASIS

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND—The state board of liquor control favors distribution of beer permits on a population basis and restrictions against "bunching" of taverns.

The board yesterday approved recommendations of a Cleveland welfare federation committee that Ohio's liquor control act be amended to include such provisions.

Chairman Harry E. Hawley said the board would recommend the proposals to Liquor Director Jacob E. Taylor along with the committee's suggestion that a "readable" leaflet emphasizing moderation be distributed with liquor sold at state stores.

The committee also suggested a reduction of liquor establishments, but Hawley commented that the state had "frozen" the number of liquor permits issued and that gasoline rationing would further curtail outlets.

At Columbus, Ferd J. Bing, assistant superintendent of stores and agencies, declared a shortage of cheap liquor gradually would grow more acute, bringing about a modified form of prohibition.

He explained that many stores had no cheaper brands and would have none during the war. Sixty-six brands are being discontinued because they cannot be replaced.

KAISER ADVISES PEACE PLANNING

Tells Industry To Get Orders Now, Take War Bond Pay.

NEW YORK —(INS)— Industry was challenged today by Henry J. Kaiser, west coast shipbuilder, to prepare now for rehabilitation of peacetime business.

Speaking at the annual dinner of the National Manufacturers' association, the production wizard told automotive manufacturers that they might now start taking orders for 1945 model motor cars, for delivery six months after the war, and accepting war bonds as a down payment.

To road builders he gave the advice that they should start planning and financing trunk highway systems and to air lines, the suggestion that they prepare to absorb the million or more war aviators now being trained by the government.

The News-Journal and a Mansfield baker received thanks from Honolulu, Hawaii, today for a birthday party they arranged by "remote control" Nov. 13 for Miss Mary Jane Lutts, 118 South Main street. The "thank you" letters came from Miss Lutts' mother, Mrs. C. W. Lutts, who asked The News-Journal and Fred "Pete" Martin, proprietor of the Buckeye bakery, to deliver the birthday cake to her daughter. "We appreciated it greatly and will never forget the kindnesses shown our daughter," Mrs. Lutts wrote. She said she enjoys entertaining servicemen at her home in Hawaii and recently had Nick Subich of Mansfield as a guest for dinner. She is looking for more Mansfielders to invite.

The news reel last night at Madison theater probably meant more to Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Chatlain, Olivesburg road, than to anyone else in the audience. In one of the pictures, outlining Gene Tunney's physical education program for men in the navy, they saw their son, Ed, former Senior high and Wittenberg college athlete. Young Chatlain, who is in the naval aviation service, was at Norfolk, Va., when the picture was made, but has since been transferred to the naval air base at Long Beach, Calif.

BUENOS AIRES — (AP) — Evidence which Federal Judge Miguel Jantus said proved that members of the German embassy staff were involved in espionage activities in Argentina was sent to the supreme court today to determine whether the Reich diplomats can be brought to trial.

CONGRESSMEN STIRRED BY JEFFER'S WORD

Declare They'll Help to Get Materials For Plants to Make Synthetic Product.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Congressional action to forestall the synthetic rubber crisis feared by Rubber Director William M. Jeffers, was promised today.

Following Jeffers' warning that the entire synthetic program may be wrecked if the supply of critical materials for building plants is delayed, Sen. Brewer (R.) Maine, predicted that the Truman committee will lend aid in getting the needed critical materials.

At the same time, Sen. Gillette (D.) Iowa, announced that his rubber subcommittee will reopen its investigation into the synthetic program to determine whether it can help.

Impressed by the gravity of the Jeffers report and his declaration that there is no one to say that rubber is the No. 1 critical program, Sen. Kilgore (D.) W. Va., declared that enactment of legislation setting up a super-war board is necessary.

Jeffers told congress that the synthetic program probably can succeed if he can get the critical materials needed to complete the plants. He added ominously, however, that he is not hopeful.

"I am informed that, although the only sure solution of the rubber problem is to subordinate other important programs to it, the demands of the services (army and navy) make this impossible."

Brewster said that when he declared last February 12 that the Truman committee would "tear the lid off" the rubber situation he acted with approval of the committee to bring the attention of the nation to the problem.

"Mr. Jeffers' report is in line with what we feared," he said. "It is at least gratifying that we have an administrative agent who tells the people the facts when most government agents have said there is nothing to worry about.

"Our committee, I am sure, will support Mr. Jeffers in steps to get priority recognition. He is telling the country the situation in the report and if there is a disaster the responsibility is not on him."

bombers followed on the tail of an Axis plane formation from Africa to sweep over the city undetected and shower their bombs on the city by daylight yesterday.

A Middle Eastern command communique reported that the attack was made in heavy force and successfuly on the dock area and other targets.

In making the raid the planes gave Italy the first terrible substantiation of the warning by Prime Minister Winston Churchill last Sunday that the Allies intended to attack southern Italy mercilessly from Africa.

Advices from Tunisia reported a confused welter of fighting in the Djedeida - Tebourba - Mateur area west of Tunis and south of Bizerte, where Allied advanced forces, after having been forced out of Djedeida and Tebourba proper were holding positions in the western outskirts awaiting the arrival of the main British First army.

Allied and Axis dispatches agreed that there had been heavy losses in the determined German counter-attacks of the last few days but whereas the Axis claimed big successes, with the capture of many tanks, armored cars and other weapons and materials, Allied dispatches indicated that the British-American-French forces were holding well.

From the Allied rear powerful forces of men and weapons were moving up to the front and some Allied sources reported that the Allies might be able to open their main attack on Tunis and Bizerte soon—not so soon, however, as has been expected before the Axis succeeded in getting a formidable army to the Tunis-Bizerte corner.

2 PASTORS IN CITY OBSERVE ANNIVERSARIES

Rev. Sheriff Marks 21st Year At St. Matthew's, Rev. Gilbert 10th at St. Paul's.

Two Mansfield ministers will commemorate anniversaries of their pastorates with special services Sunday. They are: Rev. Charles F. Sheriff, who has been pastor of St. Matthew's Lutheran church for 21 years, and Rev. Herman L. Gilbert, who will mark the 10th year of his ministry at the same time his church celebrates its organization almost 90 years ago.

Dr. George W. Miley, of Columbus, president of the Ohio Lutheran Synod, will be guest speaker at St. Paul's at 10:30 a. m. Rev. Sheriff has chosen for his Sunday morning topic "The Pastorate Comes of Age" to be delivered at the same hour at St. Matthew's. There will be special music at both churches. Harry Meier will sing "Father In Heaven," by Briggs, at St. Matthew's.

Other services at St. Matthew's include a Luther league meeting with luncheon in the basement of the church at 5 p. m. Sunday, meeting of the Alpha class, with Christmas gift exchange, Tuesday evening in the home of Mrs. William Wendland, Marion avenue, choir rehearsal Thursday evening, and Bible school Saturday at 9:30 a. m.

Meetings of St. Paul's this week start with the Guild's Christmas program to be held Tuesday evening in the home of Mrs. W. B. Linn, 428 Shepard road. "Christmas customs" will be the theme of the meeting at which there will be a gift exchange. The Mary Markley society will meet at the parsonage with Miss Helen Boyer, as hostess, Thursday evening. Miss Bertene Sawyer will present the topic. There will also be a gift exchange at this session.

St. Paul's junior choir will rehearse at 6.15 p. m. Friday, while the senior choir will convene at 7 p. m. the same evening. Junior and senior catechism will be held at 9 a. m. Saturday instead of at 10 a. m. as in former weeks.

Rev. Gilbert came to St. Paul's church Dec. 1, 1932 from his first pastorate at Lucas. He is the 22nd minister of the church with one pastor, Rev. Ludwig Krebs having surpassed him in length of service. Krebs served from 1873 to 1890.

With an active membership of 525, St. Paul's congregation has completed and paid for an extensive renovation and decoration program, started 15 years ago, throughout the church, parsonage and janitor's home at a cost of $21,600. In six out of the ten past years, the church has been named on the honor roll of the Synod of Ohio for meeting its apportioned benevolences. Benevolences of the 10-year period total $12,907.

Missionary Parley To Close Sunday

Come to the Old Fashioned Service, with special music, and soul stirring sermons, by Rev. L. N. Pease on Tues., Thurs., and Sunday 7:45 P. M. at the Pentecostal Faith Chapel, 57 South Diamond. "The Little Church with a Big Welcome, Welcomes You."

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1942.

Drive carefully tomorrow—accidents are still happening, despite restrictions and rationing.

It is being noted, in a pleased sort of way, that thus far there has been no song entitled: "I didn't raise my girl to be a welder."

"Live dangerously" was one of the early bits of advice Mussolini gave his followers—and he is now having opportunity to practice his preachment.

No Tires Assured for Next Year

JESSE JONES, secretary of commerce, is credited with the statement that artificial rubber production may reach 1,000,000 tons a year by the end of 1943. That is just a little more than a year from now. Production in normal times was estimated at two-thirds of that.

On the basis of his statement, many people with tires in fairly good condition may decide to drive about as usual. If so, they will be making a serious mistake. It will be remembered that some of Secretary Jones' estimates in the past have been too optimistic. And in the present case, there will be an unprecedented demand for rubber as production nears normal again.

That demand will come not only from the driving public, but from the army, whose supplies are being used up fast and whose needs grow continually. It might take at least two years for private motorists without priorities to replace their present tires. Better be careful, drive slowly and watch every mile.

Less Need for Parking Meters

SOMETHING along the idea advanced by Traffic Commissioner Boals—temporarily suspending collection of parking meter fees in some of the metered areas—would be advisable procedure if it develops that downtown curb space is ample to meet current needs.

Parking meters were installed to relieve traffic congestion in the business area and if there is no congestion there is no justification for the parking charge.

A try-out plan might be to suspend meter charge during the forenoon hours, to encourage morning shopping, as this would serve to prevent a return of the all-day parking practice which became prevalent before meters were installed.

Sardinia's Unwelcome Visitors

FOR AN ISLAND as near main-travelled roads as Sardinia, it has had as few visitors as any place in Europe. Lying off the Italian coast, it should attract many tourists. Actually few go there, fewer even than to its neighbor Corsica, which is seven miles north.

Lately it has been getting more visitors than for many a year, but of an unwelcome kind. Nazi troops, distrusting the efficiency of their supposed ally, Italy, have occupied this Italian community, and will use it as a base for their Mediterranean campaigning.

Sardinia has had many rulers in its day: first a mysterious people that built round towers of unknown origin and purpose, later Phoenicians, Carthaginians, Romans, Saracens, Spanish, Austrians, and finally the dukes of Savoy, ancestors of the present Italian royal house. But never have they had more unwelcome or more barbarous rulers than the Nazis who have come in with the war tides of 1942.

Grease, Glycerin and Gunpowder

TURKEY, in addition to being the traditional Thanksgiving dish, has other points, too. Turkey grease and drippings contain glycerin, an important material for explosives. John D. Orr, executive secretary of WPB's Massachusetts branch, says that if every New England housewife had saved the drippings from her Thanksgiving turkey, enough glycerin would be produced to make half a million pounds of gunpowder.

"One pound of waste cooking fats," says Mr. Orr, "will produce enough glycerin to fire four 37-millimeter anti-aircraft shells."

Thanksgiving has gone, but Christmas and other turkey days are coming. Turkey grease will help grease the skids for the Axis.

Mechanical Cotton Picker Ready

FOR SEVERAL YEARS there has been talk about a new mechanical cotton picker which was expected to be one of the great labor-saving devices of the century. Announcement has now been made that the invention has arrived at a workable stage. It has taken almost forty years of perfecting to get it there, but the manufacturers say it is now ready for use as a commercial machine.

The present situation as regards priorities will prevent the device from being made in any great numbers until the war is over, so perhaps its introduction can be made gradually, and cause less disturbance to the southern labor situation than sometimes has been feared. But any invention which will do the work of 50 to 80 laborers is bound to be upsetting in immediate effect, no matter how beneficial in the long run.

Production of other new things after the war will doubtless take up the labor slack, in time, and southern prosperity should be greatly increased as a result.

Ohio's Uncounted Population

THE POPULATION of this country is immensely greater than anybody would suppose, offhand. That is, if you consider all the residents, and if you are generous enough to include the furred and feathered people.

In the state of Ohio, for example, which is rather thickly populated with human beings, there was so much trapping last season that furs taken were valued at $2,000,000. The furs came from a million and a half wild animals—mainly muskrats, 'possums, skunks, raccoons, minks, weasels and foxes. Who would imagine, in driving along the road in any such state, that there were scattered around in the woods hundreds of thousands of 'possums, and along the streams millions of valuable muskats?

It would be impressive to have figures, or good guesses, on the extent of the wild life in general scattered throughout the country, of which most human residents are oblivious. There would be countless billions of animals and birds all going about their business as actively, and almost as intelligently, as their human neighbors do.

Inadvisable to State Peace Aims

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—Wendell Willkie recently told a Canadian audience that he was afraid peace might come without a definite plan for the future. He has a right to have this fear, for nothing seems more likely than that peace will be achieved, and by victory, before that definite map of the future world order is generally approved.

The reasons for this are not hard to find. Willkie is anxious for a statement of war aims NOW not only because of his anxiety for the future—after the war—but because he thinks such an agreement on the future plans would actually help to bring about victory. India would be the best illustration of his idea.

WELL BEFORE the end of the last war Woodrow Wilson laid down a definite program for the future in his famous 14-points. There are many who believe the statement of these points, while hostilities still raged, helped to bring about the collapse of morale in Germany which resulted in the armistice.

This theory, of course, is absolutely dependent on the conviction that the German people BELIEVED the 14 points would be carried out. It is rather difficult to imagine the Germans or the Japanese believing any statement of war aims made this time.

But there is another point. Wilson's 14 points, for the most part, were vague as to precisely how his self-determination for small people would work out in geographical boundaries. No one now defends the Versailles Treaty, but is it conceivable that anybody or any group of high minded people, sitting around a table, and with any reasonable length of time at their disposal, could have worked out a solution which would not have resulted in untold grief, bitterness and the seed for future wars?

Can we think, today, of the handing over of the inhabitants of the Marshall and Caroline Islands to the rule of Japan? Remember the treatment of the Germans in the Austrian Tyrol by Italy? And the bitterness created in the Balkans by the territorial decisions?

Now suppose, with the best intentions in the world, this country and Britain and Russia and China should attempt to state precisely what they proposed to do about local government in the various parts of the world, once victory was achieved.

It is perfectly true that such a statement, if believed, would inspire some peoples now almost disinterested in the outcome to show enthusiasm for victory by the United Nations. But is it not also true that just as surely a lot of peoples in various parts of the world would find themselves in revolt against the program?

THAT is the reason that so many practical statesmen, foreseeing the give and take which must come at the peace table, want to keep every statement of war aims shrouded in vague statements of generally accepted principles. They don't want to be specific. They want to allow ample room in construction of what these generalities mean.

Even if the United Nations leaders decide to be specific they would certainly have a lot of trouble agreeing on some points. Remember how we sympathized with Finland? Russia considers that her war against that smaller country has since been abundantly justified in that it showed her vital need for protection against Germany.

Consider the trouble we have had preventing the capture of Leningrad, even with some of the captured Finland strategic points in our possession when the Germans attacked. Stalin could say.

Listen World!

The Grass Has Come!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

THERE'S a great thing happening in America. A quiet but powerful quickening. You can see it in the faces you pass, in the voices you hear, even in the way people carry themselves. That quickening makes me think of our California winter.

There's nothing quite like a California winter. Week after week, through all the rainless, summer months, through September and October, the land lies drowsing, motionless. The creek bed's dry. The forest trails are deep with dust that smells of mint and pine, tar weed and manzanita and sweet fern. The parched grass is as golden as a fox's pelt. Above, things move. The nibbling of a deer. The lumbering shadow of a bear. A wolf's gray, soundless flight. But nothing seems to waken in the earth.

And then it breaks. One day the sky is still a turquoise glaze. Toward dusk it darkens. By dawn the rain is thudding in a steady, silvery roar across the scarlet oaks, the smoky pines, the coral dogwood and the russet brake.

One day or two or three. But, when it's through, your whole familiar world has changed. Each yard of earth—each patch of powdery weed—is filagreed with green. From every clod of soil, the grass has sprung. Each nook and slope is quivering with life. The creek roars gustily upon its way, sweeping the summer's trash. The great gray oaks are furred with brilliant moss. Even the air is cleaned, renewed. It's winter, by the calendar. But in the soil, it's spring. The grass has come again!

Something like that is happening in America. A quiet but powerful quickening. You can see it in the faces you pass, in the voices you hear, even in the way people carry themselves.

It's winter by the calendar. Yet in our souls it's spring.

For months we've known the grimmest test we've ever paced. We've worked. We've sacrificed. We've bent beneath the load. But there was no warm stirring in our hearts. We had no gusto for this war. The last one left us sick and cynical. Our hearts felt sterile as the sun-seared soil.

Our fathers—they'd gone singing to their fights. The boys of 1917 had marched to drums. But no drums beat within our slackened pulse. No war songs swelled our dry and weary throat. We had no hope.

And then it broke. Like rain. Like tears. The slow awakening to what it meant—this new crusade. The secret quickening of pride and rage. The secret swelling of the old, fierce faith. And then the sudden surge that swept away the sodden trash of fear and apathy.

Like rain it came, that quickening of hope. And now, on every side, you see the newborn life that springs like grass after the searing drought.

It's happening. We're not working now just for wages. We're not paying taxes just because we have to. We're not accepting rationing just because we're made to. We're living again! We're believing again! We're fighting again! Fighting for the way of life we love!

IT MAY BE WINTER ON THE CALENDAR—
BUT IN OUR HEARTS IT'S SPRING!

How to Get Warm.

One school of governmental thought held 65 degrees could be comfortable this winter, if the home owners only provided themselves with enough humidity. Now the Associated Press science editor discovers that the best heating minds think such humidity is impractical. It would only crack the walls and let in more cold.

As far as some of the fuel oil users are concerned, the talk of 65 degrees is far-fetched anyway. The complicated ration formula allows many persons no more than half their usual fuel oil. When real winter comes, they can only dream about the comfort of 65.

There is just one thing that could warm people at 65 or even 50 degrees. It is not the humidity but the sense that they are making a necessary sacrifice to win the war. In the pervading warmth of patriotism they can take anything.—Kansas City Times.

Summary of Week's Happenings

Uncle Sam's First Year of War Changes American Way of Life

—By ASSOCIATED PRESS

JUST a year ago this week-end the last act of an international drama was drawing to a close at Washington. It was the old, old story of Sam, the trusting, big-hearted country boy, and his troubles with the city slickers.

The setting was the state department. The lines for Sam were delivered by Cordell Hull, those for the city slickers by a team of double-talking experts, Kichisaburo Nomura and Saburo Kurusu.

By fits and starts, the drama moved along, spinning around the question of Japan's purpose in concentrating troops near the borders of Thailand.

Punch Line.

Sam's characterization never changed until the end, when he discovered that while the city slickers were talking, the rest of their gang had sneaked up from behind and started punching with brass knuckles. Sam realized he had been duped, and as the scenery went crashing down on the stage, he told the city slickers they had been talking "infamous falsehoods and distortions," in fact, just plain damned lies.

The main event has been on almost a year, now, and the three principal characters of the earlier drama are still active. Kurusu, honored by the emperor upon his return to Japan for his "handling" of relations with the U. S., is the leader of the bloc charging this country with responsibility for the war. Nomura's utterings have been restrained; he recently urged his country not to underestimate the strength of its enemy.

Diplomat Hull.

Cordell Hull has written a bold chapter in American diplomatic history. To him went much of the credit for inter-American solidarity; he maintained the delicate balance with Vichy France while America and England were building their gigantic second front in Africa. He strengthened relations with Russia, with China.

The U. S. that was unprepared in the Pacific on Dec. 7 has steadily branched out to every front of the global war. It has sent scores of ships with millions of tons of cargo into every sea and ocean; its army has gone from 1,800,000 men who trained with wooden guns and stove-pipe artillery to 4,800,000 superbly-equipped fighting men, its navy from 325,000 men to 1,175,000, its marine corps from 62,000 to 210,000.

Eve of the anniversary found the nation's ground forces entrenched in the Solomon Islands after a spectacular naval victory over Japan; its forces on the offensive in the skies over Europe and on the ground and sky in Africa and New Guinea.

At home, production problems that dragged the early days of the war effort continued to ease, materials for war rolled in increasing quantities. Americans settled down for a long war, hoped for a short one, saw nothing ahead but victory.

At Home

More Life-Savers.

Today's soldier fights better, recovers quicker because science and invention have met the necessities of war with such things as blood plasma, the flying ambulance, the sulfa drugs, concentrated and dehydrated foods.

From Baltimore's famed Johns Hopkins Medical school last week came two additions: A medicated transparent cellulose bandage, containing sulfadiazine and which may be left on a wound for days at a time, still permitting inspection; and a new skin-graft knife, simplified for use in battle areas. Both developments were rated invaluable in the treatment of burns, a major cause of death and disfigurement in modern war.

First Miss.

Starting with the capture of eight Nazi saboteurs last summer after they landed on the east coast, the government ran up an impressive record of prosecution.

Six of the eight were executed after their conviction; six Chicagoans were convicted of treasonable complicity and three were sentenced to death.

But the government ran into a snag last week. Helmut Leiner, 33-year-old German-born Long Island gardener, was acquitted, by a directed verdict from the bench, of charges of treason: Aiding two of the executed saboteurs after their arrival in New York.

Justice department immediately tabbed him a "dangerous enemy," planned to intern him for the duration.

Household Problems.

After weeks of competitive shopping for shrinking coffee stocks, this week housewives began buying coffee on a ration stamp basis one pound for each adult (over 15) for five weeks.

But now that coffee once more was available, Mrs. America ran into trouble at her meat market and the outlook for butter was not too bright. Lines formed in butcher shops, especially in the east where meat supplies dwindled, then virtually vanished.

Shoppers were fortunate indeed if they could find the 2½ pounds of meat suggested as the voluntary maximum pending meat rationing, postponed until spring. Hungry meat eaters and worn butchers hoped for earlier meat rationing.

The Drouth Comes.

California's reaction to nation-wide gas rationing was Hollywoodian: Motorists rented abandoned gasoline stations, cached gas in the underground tanks against the lean days of no coupons.

In congress, too, the reaction of some legislators to this plan for rubber-conservation was typical: Angry at the extension over their protests of gasoline rationing to their states from the previously "dry" eastern seaboard, many congressmen got mad at Leon Henderson, threatened to cut OPA off without a cent in the coming appropriation bills unless the price administrator and his "bureaucrats" were thrown out.

Undersecretary of War Patterson advised opponents of rationing that "we can not and will not deny our soldiers the finest equipment in order to cater to the whims of those who don't seem to realize that their country is at war."

Rumor Factory.

The Office of War Information analyzed more than 4,500 rumors reported to federal agencies in the last 11 months and found they came in five general classes, probably nourished and spread by Axis agents and sympathizers.

OWI's breakdown:

"Hate rumors" expressing "prejudice, animosity, or hostility for groups other than the enemy."

"Anxiety rumors" reflecting uneasiness of fear through unfounded reports of disasters, Allied weakness and overwhelming enemy strength.

"Escape rumors" indulging in unwarranted optimistically wishful thinking about the progress and duration of the war.

"Supernatural rumors" containing fantastic prophecies of disaster or impending miracles.

"Curiosity rumors" containing amusing or novel tidbits of supposed "news."

OWI's rules of rumor-killers:

Never repeat a rumor, not even to deny it.

If you know the facts to spike a rumor, cite them promptly. If you don't have the facts, insist the rumor-teller reveal his source and authority.

Don't give a rumor the benefit of any doubt.

Abroad

Last Ditch.

Across the Mediterranean from Toulon's graveyard of the French fleet the Nazis were experiencing for the second time in a few weeks the sensation of back-to-the-wall fighting.

Rommel's men went through it in Egypt and Libya, now the Germans, with the questionable help of the Italians, were being slowly hemmed into a narrow stretch in the Bizerte-Tunis area of Tunisia.

In the development of the operation, Allied quarters let few details seep through, but the AEF and the British First Army were crunching forward, jabbing wedges into the Axis lines, wrecking airfields, setting the stage for a swift, all-out blow which seemed a matter of only a few days away.

Russia Hits Hard.

Mighty Russian armies were on the offensive this week and Moscow was jubilant. It was the Germans' turn, so the Russians reported, to train machine guns at their soldiers' backs to keep them from retreating. It was Hitler's turn to wonder where he could find soldiers to plug the gaps in his front lines, where he could find warm clothes to keep his troops in the fight, how he could keep his supply lines open in the face of another Russian winter.

From Kalinin northwest of Moscow a drive struck due west at Velikie Luki. Another branched southwest beyond Rzhev and a third hit south toward Vyazma. The Russians claimed to be killing 10,000 Germans a day, taking few prisoners because of the fierce fighting.

When Winston Churchill was in Moscow last August, he told Stalin, "When we have decisively defeated Rommel in Egypt, I will send you a telegram." And Stalin replied, "When we make our counter-offensive here"—and he drew a narrow on a map—"I will send you one."

In his birthday-eve address Churchill reported both telegrams as having been sent and gratefully received.

Gloria Italia.

". . . Our operations in French North Africa should enable us to bring the weight of the war home to the Italian Fascist state in a manner not hitherto dreamed of by its guilty leaders. . . ."

As Winston Churchill intoned this solemn warning there was no reason to believe he was telling Italy's unhappy bedraggled millions something they didn't already know. Banked along the southern shore of the Mediterranean lay three powerful Allied armies—the American Expeditionary Force, the Dunkerque-hardened British First Army and the Rommel-routing British Eighth Army.

Down in Italian Libya and up on the far tip of Tunisia Axis forces clung to defensive positions while the Allies inched ahead for a showdown. Bizerte and Tunis in Allied hands would leave Sicily and Sardinia only a half-hour's bomber time away. Naples little more than an hour.

Stories persisted that Mussolini was gravely ill, might be supplanted.

Signs of Times

The treasury's idea of a complete Christmas card this year is one with two stamps—a postage stamp and a war stamp. The department, launching a national campaign, estimated a billion 10-centers could be sold in this manner.

Washington stores have quit delivering packages weighing less than five pounds—but they'll make an exception if the package is "unwieldy" — over 50 inches in length and girth combined.

Tragedy In Boston Night Club

THE year 1903 made its exit on a note of horrible tragedy; on Dec. 30 fire broke out in the old Iroquois theater in Chicago, killed 602 persons to become the worst disaster of its kind in the nation's history.

This week stunned Boston counted its rows of dead in a fire of smaller proportions than Chicago's, but just as ghastly.

It was just before the floor show in swank, glittering Cocoanut Grove, tucked away on a little side street a few blocks from Boston's Common. Through the revolving-door entrance had passed a thousand patrons—social registerites, college boys and girls, soldiers and sailors and just plain people.

Band Leader Mickey Alpert raised his baton for the fanfare, and off in a corner of the packed ballroom a jet of flame raced up through the dry covering of an imitation palm tree. It leaped to filmy draperies as confused guests screamed, knocked over tables and chairs in panicky flight for the exit.

A few stumbled, others fell on them and in a twinkling the corridors were turned into a mass of screeching, struggling, agonized humanity. Some cries were choked off by waves of black, asphyxiating smoke; others were heightened by the searing flames that spread through all parts of the building.

Hours later, from the ruins had been taken some 300 bodies, many so badly burned they could not be identified. By midweek the toll had passed 475 and included old-time cowboy film star Charles (Buck) Jones, who escaped alive but burned, died later in a hospital. Over 150 others were injured.

Almost before the last body had been removed came the official investigation, and with it the inevitable skein of contradictions. A 16-year-old bus boy said he accidentally touched a match to the tree while changing a light bulb, but fire inspection officials said the flimsy decorations appeared to have been properly flame-proofed.

The investigators were told, too, how a panic lock, designed to yield from the inside under pressure, had been out of order and replaced with another lock. And while scores died trying to reach the doorway, officials said they regarded the number of exits as "sufficient."

REVIEW OF 'THE ROBE' GIVEN BY CLEVELANDER

Mansfield Women Hear Mrs. W. E. Benninghoff Tell About Lloyd C. Douglas' New Novel at First Presbyterian Church.

ONE of literature's greatest themes: the crucifixion of Jesus and the birth of Christianity is presented by Lloyd C. Douglas in his new novel, "The Robe," which was reviewed by Mrs. W. E. Benninghoff in the auditorium of the First Presbyterian church Friday afternoon. The review was the third and last in the 1942 series under the auspices of the Women's Association of the First Congregational church.

Mrs. Charles Fox, president of the association, introduced Mrs. Benninghoff and announced that, if transportation can be arranged, the Clevelad reviewer will present her annual evening program here in the spring and will give another series of book reviews next fall.

In his new book, Mr. Douglas combines fact and fantasy and as in his previous novels, "Magnificent Obsession," "White Banners" and "Green Light," skillfully uses the theme of regeneration through crisis. The author believes that if a person can go through life doing good deeds and saying nothing about them, he will receive a special kind of blessing.

For 30 years Mr. Douglas labored diligently, preparing to write this book. He had compiled many Biblical facts and decided on the fictional part of the story when he was asked to whom the robe of Jesus went after the crucifixion. The Bible does not say, so the author created his own story and combined it with historical facts.

The Gospel says that after Jesus had been crucified the Roman soldiers, having carried out this task, cast lots for His coat. The questions Mr. Douglas attempts to answer in "The Robe" are "To whom did this, 'woven without seam, woven from the top throughout,' fall as a prize? And what happened to it and its possessor afterward?" It is an ingenious, yet plausible plot.

Setting of the book is in Judea in the days of Pontius-Pilate. The reader beholds his uneasy sentence imposed upon a young Jewish prophet who has disturbed the peace of the province. Marcellus Gallio, a Minoan captain, is assigned to carry out the deed, and under his eyes the Galilean is crucified. The Romans cast dice for the robe, and Marcellus wins. Marcellus is obsessed with remorse. The robe is first a symbol of guilt, so that he fears to see it, then of spiritual rebirth, so that its touch gives him strength and peace again. He seeks out the disciples and becomes himself a devotee of the new Christianity.

HOROSCOPE

For Sunday, December 6.

Sunday's horoscope forecasts a particularly lively and pleasant day, with much of interest stirring in all departments of life. The emphasis seems to be on the pursuit of pleasure, with comradeship, conviviality and romantic engagements, with all heart interests paramount. However, all pertaining to the state, church and clergy flourishes, with literary, social and cultural prestige enhanced.

Those whose birthday it is are assured a very lively and successful year with all things moving at high tempo and toward goals of successful and lucrative culminations. High place and power may be aimed at but not to excess or with too lavish or impetuous behavior. Social, financial, status expands and romantic interests.

For Monday, December 7.

Monday's astrological augury is for an unusual state of affairs, contradictory and of mixed influences which may require acumen, vigilance, prudence and high principle to overcome. There should be splendid openings for distinguished service to the public and achievements in private enterprise of major importance are at hand, but subject to sudden reversals. Push ahead resolutely.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a major opportunity for outstanding success, with public and private affiliations under splendid augury for distinguished constructive work. However, a sudden and suprising element, with reversals, threatened loss, estrangements and devastating force, must be vanquished.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

Mary smiled impishly at me, in no wise abashed by my injunction.

"You're following the rule of 'gittin' there fustest'," she gibed. "Give an account of your own self. Here I drop in, a perfectly innocent visitor, and find my revered auntic tete-a-tete with a distinguished and handsome fugitive young king. If that isn't a romantic situation for you, I'll eat my best chapeau."

"It won't do, Mary," I told her quietly, and something in my voice evidently sobered her, for the smile left her face.

"I wasn't trying to stall, honest, Auntie Madge," she said, with sincerity in her voice, "and I wasn't falling for Georges' line as you came in, either. But I couldn't help listening to him."

Mary's Persiflage.

"You might have screamed for help," I told her dryly, and she laughed outright.

"Yes, and cried 'unhand me, villain!' " she said. "But that wasn't necessary. Whatever you dropped on the bedroom floor probably jolted the furniture loose in the suite below this.

"Just a stick of wood," I said, "but I had no choice. Georges would have died of embarrassment if he had known that I saw and heard the impassioned scene he had been staging."

"Now listen, dearie!" Mary burlesqued, "I've got something I want to lay on the line right now, and I want you to hear it—and heed it," and she placed her hand overy my mouth.

"I am not in the slightest danger of falling for Georges' romantic appeal," she went on, "or for his manly beauty—and he's got scads of both—or for his skillful line, than which there's none whicher.

Same Old Georges.

"I've had my education in all those things. Georges trotted them all out the year Olina was at The Larches. He hasn't improved a bit since, but he hasn't deteriorated, either," she added honestly. Then, as I moved my head restlessly, she took her hand from my mouth.

"Honestly, Auntie Madge," she said contritely, "I'm awfully sorry. I didn't mean to gag you."

"You didn't," I said. "I'm very glad to hear what you have just said, but there's also something else for you to consider. Even if you are in no danger of getting romantically interested in Georges, what about him?"

She stood silent for a second.

"You mean, I suppose, is he falling for me?" she said. "Honestly, Auntie Madge, I don't know. Georges always was given to flitting from flower to flower, you know. I don't mean he's fickle, or wouldn't make a wonderful husband once he settled down. But the adolescent romance isn't all out of his system yet, and just now he's pleased to indulge in memories."

"Dangerous things, sometimes," I said sententiously.

"Not in George's case," she said positively, "for they don't go deep enough. And certainly not in mine. But I wish you could devise a way to direct his attention in some other direction. What I'm worrying about is Olina. She isn't going to like this a little bit, you know."

Mary's clear eyes held a shadow, and I recalled Olina's many past attempts to annex Noel, which must have left a searing memory on Mary's soul.

"Perhaps she'll recall the proverb about chickens coming home to roost," I said.

DINA CASHMAN + + +

By Kathleen Norris

(Copyright, 1942.)

CHAPTER II

Dina looked at the "Y" and thought of the nice woman who had asked her to join the "Y" club in San Jose, and her heart failed her and anxiety and fear came rushing back. She had always wanted to join such a club somewhere; she had thought that she would be a great favorite if fortune had permitted her to be one of the busy, chattering planning girls of that successful organization. She would be the girl at the head of the table, the girl who made announcements, at whose words everyone laughed in approval.

Oh, well, perhaps everything would even yet be all right, perhaps she would go on in a few weeks, a sadder and wiser but no longer a terrified girl. Oh, how grateful she would be! Grateful to what, grateful to whom, she did not know, but her heart was swelling even now, in the darkest hour of her apprehension, in anticipation of that rush of weakening, overwhelming relief.

"Hello, Dina!" said a friendly voice as a squarely built boy emerged from a shadowy doorway. Dina jumped, laughed, caught his outstretched hand, and smiled radiantly.

"Tom O'Connor! When'd you get home?"

"Tonight. I was coming down to your house. How long have you been waiting?" For she knew he had been waiting, whatever the time had been, and that now his heart was beating thunderously in his breast, that he couldn't answer her because he couldn't call his swimming senses to order.

"Two months," he managed to say with a laugh.

"Oh, two months, yes," she said, stabbed again. Tom had gone away to the mills in Westwood before—before—

But she wouldn't think about it! It wouldn't happen! Everything would be all right!

They walked along the sidewalk linked together by his arm under her elbow. Tom was a big fellow but not tall, and Dina stood almost shoulder to shoulder with him.

"Do you like Westwood, Tom?"

"Sure, I like it. It's kind of like—oh, I don't know, being in the army—being in a camp or something. But I like it. I'm going back Sunday night."

"Girls up there, Tom?"

"Sure. What d'you think it is—a seminary? But I missed home at first, and lordy, I missed Ma!"

"She missed you."

"She said so. She said she kept lighting candles to Saint Joseph."

"I should think she'd light 'em to Saint Thomas," Dina said idly, thinking of the boy's name. She was pleased when he laughed.

"They don't often have Saint Thomas in church," he told her. "But they always have Saint Joseph. He was the guardian of Our Lord."

"Oh?" But her thoughts were not of his words. "Isn't Tom O'Connor good," she mused. "Isn't a good fellow a safe sort of thing! Well, I guess Vere Holland must be good, too. Only he seems younger than Tom—sillier, not so responsible. Oh, I wish I liked Tom—I wish I'd fallen in love with Tom!"

They went into the lighted, hot drugstore that blended a thousand odors into a general one predominantly of vanilla, carbolic acid, and coffee. Melda Binn was there with Charlie Lomax; they said the others were at the 7 o'clock show and were going over to Cotta's afterward.

Dina sat on a high revolving stool at the counter and sipped a sweet drink flavored with wintergreen and looked at herself between the bright manifold signs that framed the mirror.

"Want to go to the show, Dina?"

"Oh, no; it's nearly 9 o'clock already. Let's have sandwiches or dogs or something at Cotta's and talk."

"Suits me," Tom said. They were joined in their discussion by the clerk, Len Hargess, who said he would come over to Cotta's, too, after closing.

"We won't be that late. You stay open until nearly 11, don't you?" Tom asked. Len said maybe Gus would take over about 10. Most folks went right home after the nine; they didn't want to be out much later than that.

"Find things changed, Tom?" Len asked, swabbing the counter.

"Only Dina. She's prettier than ever," Tom said.

Dina, who had been studying her own reflection in the mirror, pushing up a curled lock, touching a tiny powder pad to her nose, smiled absently. Her appearance was not her immediate concern!

Nothing of this familiar scene seemed the same tonight. An anxious trickle of thought underran it like a tiny stream of filth and shame, breaking it slowly but surely away from its regular course, undermining everything, changing everything. Tom's flattery and her own comeliness and the homage of her little crowd meant nothing now.

Only one fact, one fearful suspicion, was significant, and until that fact was denied or confirmed she would live in a world apart from everyone.

Cotta's was an old assembly hall that had been abandoned for years until the present proprietor had rented it. He had swept its wide bleak floors, hung some limp bunting in loops under its windows, pushed a mechanical piano into one of its empty corners, arranged a group of small tables in another.

Men paid 25 cents admittance; girls came in free. Beer and soft drinks were sold, and sandwiches wrapped in oiled paper might be had for a nickel apiece.

All sorts of persons came to Cotta's. It was cheap, for one thing. Men brought queer-looking women there on Saturday and Sunday nights, and they sat laughing and murmuring over their drinks until the next morning's early hours.

Sometimes absorbed groups gathered about the battered old billiard table that occupied one corner of the great space; often men played nickel poker or rummy.

Even with this furnishing there was plenty of room left. That was the great attraction at Cotta's. In the center of the hall was a dance floor large enough to accommodate a hundred couples. No crowding here. Forlorn and bare as the place was, when the piano duly began its pounding and the young feet moved on the smooth old board floor it afforded only sheer delight to the dancers from Railway Flats.

In the corner where the tables stood and where drinks and sandwiches were served some small effort at decoration had been made. Eighteen wooden columns, about seven feet high, had been set up to form a sort of arbor, twined with cottage grapevines and threaded with colored electric bulbs.

These last shed a softened light upon Dina and her intimates as they took possession of a special table and prepared themselves for an hour or two of pleasure.

Young Tony came forward in shirt sleeves and vest to take their order. He wore no collar, his pleasant face was beaded with perspiration.

"Big dinner tonight, Tony?" Dina surmised.

"Beeg? My God they say 70 and Poppa feed one hundred twantaseex," Tony answered without punctuation.

Dina always drank pop or coke or some other soft drink. Her mother had impressed her early in life with the danger of intoxicants, and her father had contributed an unconscious yet far more forceful lesson. Tonight, sipping her dark, sweet-flavored beverage, she reflected somewhat sadly upon the irony of their warnings. It had not been drink that had brought her to her present predicament. She had not been carried away. She had loved, deeply, truly, and she loved now.

"Dance again, Dina?"

"Sure, Dunk." This time it was the older Beatty boy. Dina went around and around the hall in a dream. In five minutes she was glad to be landed back again at her place at table.

Frances Tack and Betty Lomax were the other girls with her, and there were five boys—Tom O'Connor, Ward Binn, Dunk Beatty, Willie Mulligan and Charles Lomax. Frances Tack worked with Dina in Meyer's grocery. Frances, at 24, had had an unhappy marriage, a divorce behind her, and now a two-year-old daughter to support.

Frances was hard, brief of speech, skeptical, disillusioned. She was hopelessly in love with Tom, who was indeed the most attractive, the most ambitious, steady, and best-looking of the boys. Tom's mother would rather have seen him laid in his grave than married to Frances, but as Tom was not in the least interested in the grass widow the alternative was not likely to be mentioned.

Betty and Charlie Lomax were nice but, in the parlance of the group, dumb. Charlie could bore any girl almost into a coma in 5 minutes, and Betty was a simple little fool who told everybody everything she knew or imagined she knew, babbled that her mother had an old friend who gave her a squirrel coat because she got him a new customer and that Papa was so mad he made her send it back.

Everyone knew that flighty, artistically blond little Mrs. Lomax was as free as she was mysterious in her friendships, her engagements, her affairs of the heart, but everyone blamed foolish little Betty for prattling so innocently about it.

Betty also was in love; she was crazy about Ward Binn. Ward liked a girl he had met in Stockton and wrote her every week Tom O'Connor had always been in love with Dina Cashman; their affair and the pairing of their names were established facts.

But Dina knew tonight that all was over. She had never loved Tom, had never thought seriously of marrying him. The possibility assumed a new charm as it faded forever.

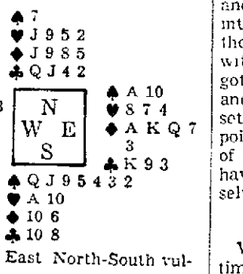
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

BE A REAL "COMPETER"

A competitor is supposed to be anyone who takes part in a competition. But there is a big difference between those who only participate and those who do some real competing. Some of the players are merely in there trying to play as nice a game as they can, trying to bid as accurately as possible, trying to take as many tricks as they can in the play. The attitude of some others is entirely different. Their prime thought is that they are trying to beat the other entrants. They are "competers," ever ready to double your bid when you get too high.



(Dealer: East North-South vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
1 ♦	2 ♣	Dbl

Everybody in this rubber bridge game knew South as a player who uses that kind of a jump overcall as a "barrier bid," indicating a long suit in a weak hand and intended to crowd the opponents, possibly keep them out of their best contract.

Knowing that, West felt that 3-No Trumps should be easy for his side to make. But he also took account of South's being vulnerable and saw that setting him two tricks doubled would produce points worth more than a not-vulnerable game. Relaizing from his partner's opener that, South could hardly take any tricks in the side suits, he doubled.

Two diamond tricks, the ruff of a third by South with the spade 9 and over-ruff by the K, the club 5 to the K and return of the diamond A brought a high ruff from South with the spade J. That play made it certain East would get two trump tricks with his A and 10, as South could not get into the dummy to lead through them. Besides these three tricks with their trumps, the defenders got two tricks each in the minors and one in hearts, eight all told, setting South three tricks for 800 points, practically twice the value of the No Trump game they could have made playing the hand themselves.

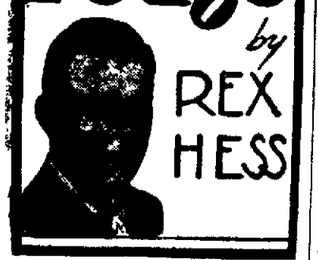
Sport Podge by REX HESS



Comes the word from Oxford, O., that Coach W. J. "Blue" Foster has picked two first teams to be used interchangeably as complete units when the Redskins open their basketball season tonight against Transylvania college of Kentucky.

One team is composed entirely of sophomores, the other has two veterans and three freshmen. Since you've already been informed in this space that Mansfield's Jack Shiplet had made the first squad at Miami, you will not be expected to display any great surprise at the news that Shiplet is one of the freshmen.

He'll be teaming up with an old rival, Elmer "String" Bean, the lanky football end and basketball center from Springfield. Another freshman on the quintet is Bob Brown of Greenville McLain. The veterans are Tom Stump of Lima and Bob Jines of Milford.

On the sophomore team are Bennie Cole of Greenville, Glen Kessler and Bill Shank of Hamilton, Gordon Rosencrans of Upper Arlington, and Jim Mayberry of Lorain.

Coach Foster explains that one of his teams is a fast-breaking outfit, the other a slower quintet for set offense, but which is which he is keeping a deep, dark secret.

It's my guess that Shiplet and Bean are on the set offense team.

The lanky Bean is an ideal pivot man for set offense, and Foster could have scoured the state for a better guard than Shiplet for bringing the ball down the floor and moving it around on set offense. Sorry if I've spilled any secrets.

Foster likes the lanky lads. Of the ten players on his two first teams, eight are over six feet tall. Shiplet and Kessler are five feet, ten.

For Mansfield fans who want to follow Shiplet's antics on the college hardwood, here is the rest of the Miami schedule:

Dec. 12-Wabash; Dec. 15-Wilmington. Jan. 8-Akron; Jan. 12—At Cincinnati; Jan. 15-At Ohio Wesleyan; Jan. 16-At Ohio U.; Jan. 19-Dayton; Feb. 5-Oberlin; Feb. 13-Western Reserve; Feb. 20-Ohio U.; Feb. 27-Cincinnati.

Seems Mansfields gridiron Tygers could have used a lineman named Thomas Snyder this past fall.

Snyder, a former Mansfield boy, who attended St. Peter's, has been elected captain of the 1943 Upper Sandusky high school team. He's a tackle.

* * *

What? We needed a tackle named Snyder? We had a tackle named Snyder. Jerry Snyder. Too many Snyders might have confused Coach Snyder.

Tygers Lose In Opener

First Period Jitters Decide Cage Battle.

MANSFIELD high school's Tygers went down to defeat 35-44 in their 1942-43 basketball opener last night at Columbus South, but Coach Vern Hoffman found reason for encouragement in the performance of his new cage quintet.

"They had a bad case of stage fright at the beginning of the game," Hoffman said today, "and had the ball four times before they ever took a shot. And South's tall, sharpshooting boys got away to a 10-0 lead. After that it wasn't such a bad game.

Since South had only a nine-point margin at the end of the game, Hoffman's contention that it wasn't a bad game after the boys lost their stage fright appears born out.

South led 12-4 at the end of the first quarter, 22-16 at the half as Mansfield took a 12-10 margin in the second period, and South held on to its lead, 32-25 at the third quarter.

"What encourages me," said Hoffman, "is the fact that after that bad first period, the boys hit right around 10 points per quarter for the rest of the game. And if they can keep that up they will win some ball games.

"South's advantage in size kept us on the defense all night, particularly on tip-offs after held balls. We had to line up defensively to stop their fast break."

Little Bob Baker, sparkplug of last year's reserve team, took over the same job with the Tygers last night, chalking up 15 points on five buckets and five free tosses. Andy Lameraux checked in with nine points.

* * *

Dean Hahn, only starting veteran, went out on fouls in the third quarter, and was replaced by another veteran, Jim Robertson, who contributed six points to the Tyger total.

The Tygers open their home season against Newark next Friday night.

DI MAGGIO'S WIFE PLANNING DIVORCE

RENO, Nev. —(U.P.)— Secluded in a hotel suite here, Dorothy Arnold DiMaggio refused to talk to reporters today but her attorney, Joseph P. Haller, said that after the necessary six weeks' residence, she will file suit for divorce against her husband, Joe, slugging New York Yankees outfielder.

The former movie starlet has the couple's 13-months-old baby, Joe III, with her and Haller indicated she would seek custody of the child.

Redlegs Get Eddie Miller

Give Two Players and Cash For Shortstop.

CHICAGO —(INS)— The nation's sports fans can adjourn baseball's winter stove leagues today and concentrate on the year's final football games and on winter sports until the annual treks to spring training camps start.

All the fuel that was unloaded at the major and minor league sessions, just ended in Chicago, would supply no more than a couple of flickers of flame to feed the fires of diamond discussions.

Only a few conclusions could be drawn from the meetings—one, that the St. Louis Cardinals and the New York Yankees will meet in the 1943 world series if the series is played.

The one big league deal during the meeting certainly could not jockey the Boston Braves nor the Cincinnati Reds into a pennant contending position in the National league. This sent Eddie Miller, veteran Brave shortstop, to the Reds in exchange for Eddie Joost, an infielder, and Nate Andrews, a minor league pitcher.

The Braves received some cash in addition to Joost and Andrews. Last season Miller hit .243, while Joost batted .223. With Syracuse last year, Andrews won 7 games and lost 12. The 28-year-old right-hander had a successful big league career with the St. Louis Cardinals, the St. Louis Browns and the Cleveland Indians. Cleveland at one time suspended him as the result of extra curricular activities in taverns. Both Miller and Joost are 26.

Peculiarly enough, Miller at one time was with the Reds, but at that time Cincinnati decided he couldn't make the big league grade. This same Miller was sought by the Chicago Cubs a couple of seasons back and they were willing at that time to pay as high as $100,000 for him.

The Chicago White Sox showed signs of dealing but finally settled by acquiring a couple of rookie pitchers from Shreveport and a rookie outfielder from San Diego of the Pacific Coast league.

Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, left the meeting with Bob Johnson, his much sought-after outfielder, still on the A's pay roll. There was some discussions that Johnson and First Baseman Dick Siebert might go to the Sox in exchange for First Baseman Joe Kuhel and Second Baseman Don Kolloway. The possibility that Kolloway might be due for an army call soon is believed to have balked that deal.

Other player transactions sent Leo (Gabby) Hartnett to Jersey City as player-manager and Frank Demaree, outfielder to the St. Louis Cardinals. Clay Bryant, former pitcher for the Chicago Cubs, was made a free agent, since being cast adrift by the Cubs and their farm team, Tulsa.

* * *

Although 25 of the 26 minor leagues intimated that they were ready to do business as usual next season, it was indicated that only about 15 of the circuits will be able to finish their schedules because of the draft and gasoline and rubber rationing.

Rams Cop Opener From Union Quint

Holding Union scoreless in the second period, Madison high school Rams battled to a 25-16 win in their first basketball game of the season last night at Union.

Union had gained an 8-7 lead at the quarter mark, but the half found Madison holding a 16-8 margin and the Rams coasted in from there. Score at the third quarter was 22-12.

* * *

Captain Billy Wynn led the Rams with 13 points, while tall Jack Hammett starred on both offense and defense for Union.

Sport Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK—(AP)—There isn't much point in criticizing the New York state athletic commission, as that august body has been worked over pretty thoroughly by expert critics, but its handling of the lightweight title situation was nothing less than noteworthy.... At any rate, you can expect Beau Jack or Tippy Larkin to trip over his long, gray beard some day when he's told that the 13-man elimination finally has ended and he's due to defend his championship against the survivor.

ONE-MINUTE SPORTS PAGE:

Boston college almost failed to get that invitation to the Orange Bowl game, but not because of the Holy Cross debacle. . . . While John P. Curley, B. C. athletic director, was patiently listening for the telephone bell, the call from Florida was routed to the office of Eleanor Mosely, publicity director at Boston university.

A SUITE RECEPTION.

Scribes returning from the Chicago baseball meetings tell about a prominent baseball man who strolled into his favorite hotel, now taken over by the army, and asked if his reservation had been received. . . . 'Maybe so, brother, I don't know," replied the soldier behind the desk. "All I know is you've got to enlist to get in this place nowadays."

Shelby Wins In Closing Seconds

SHELBY—The Shelby Whippets defeated Crestline, 33 to 31, in the opening basketball game for both schools last night.

Bob Roberts sank the winning basket for the Whippets in the final 15 seconds after the score had been tied up, 31 to 31. Ralph Higgins, veteran of last year's Shelby team, took high scoring honors with 13 points.

The Whippets were forced to rally in the second half after Crestline had held the lead during the entire first two periods. The visitors led 10 to 6 at the end of the first quarter and 17 to 11 at the half. Shelby rallied in the third period to take the lead 27 to 25 going into the final stanza. Crestline was able to tie the score up three times during the final quarter but Roberts' basket in the last few seconds gave the Whippets the victory.

The greatest menace to southern fishing is the alligator gar—a monstrous, destructive fish, which often attains a length of 7 feet and a weight of well over 200 pounds. It has been estimated that the gar eats his own weight in game and food fish every 36 hours. This estimate was made after finding fish weighing as much as 8 pounds in various stages of digestion in a gar's stomach.

A pine cone, neatly embedded in the cener of a nine-inch block of wood he was chopping, presented R. E. Alder of Missoula, Mont., with a mystery he can't solve. Apparently, the cone was fresh and alive, although it must have been embedded in the heart of a tree for a long time.

In spite of gasoline restrictions, hunting parties in the Transvaal are greater than ever before and more game has been killed than in any previous year, causing elephant herds to flee to their most secret hiding places.

The little horses of the Grand Canyon country have long been a favorite subject of travelers, but few have been brought out to satisfy the curiosity of the general public. Foster Marshall, an Indian, caught one weighing 150 pounds and standing 43 inches at the shoulders. He said it was the smallest he had seen in a lifetime in Havasupae Canyon. Experts examined the teeth and said it was about five years old. Local legend has it that many years ago a band of horses was trapped in a small canyon with just enough feed to keep them alive. Generations of inbreeding and malnutrition stunted their growth until they became curiosities. Marshall sold his specimen to an animal oddities show.

If he (or she) likes fishing, you can win their sincere thanks by giving fishing tackle this Christmas. You'll find a host of suggestions in Yuncker's complete stocks, including rods, reels, lines, tackle boxes, flies, etc., for as much or as little as you wish to spend. And for indoor days they'll like the new card, golfing and bowling games, just received.

HENRY ARMSTRONG STOPS LEW JENKINS

PORTLAND, Ore.—(U.P.)—Henry Armstrong, still showing no respect for those who said he was through, scored an eight-round technical knockout over Former Lightweight Champion Lew Jenkins last night and added another victory to his comeback string.

Jenkins gamely fought to the last. Eight times the little negro knocked him to the canvas and each time he struggled back to his feet, and tried to carry the fight to Armstrong.

Revolta Paces Golf Tourney

Says He's Set Heart On Winning This One.

MIAMI, Fla. —(AP)— Jut-jawed Johnny Revolta of Evanston, Ill., one of golf's best front-runners, headed into the final two rounds of the $5,000 Miami open tournament today with a two-stroke lead and no worries about the field breathing on his neck.

"Somebody is going to win, so it doesn't make any difference to me whether I'm behind or ahead," he declared after wresting the top spot from Ben Loving of Springfield, Mass., with a five-under-par 65 in the second round.

"But I've set my heart on winning this one," he added.

Revolta sank a 40-foot approach shot on the 18th for the 65 which gave him a 36-hole score of 135.

In second place was Harold McSpaden of Philadelphia, who had to work hard for the par 70 which gave him a half-way 137.

KRUPA LEADS

CHICAGO—(AP)—Howard Sanders of Middletown, O., rolled 780 for third place in sweepstakes as crack keglers warmed up for today's opening of the nine-day all-star bowling tournament. Joe Krupa of Cleveland, with 833, was first.

Coast Teams In Twin Bill

Big Games Figure In Rose Bowl Picture.

NEW YORK — (U.P.) — Only two games—both in the Pacific coast conference—have a titular tinge today as traditional fervor and intersectional rivalry furnish the chief excitement in a slim, nine-game football card.

Southern California and UCLA continue their drive for a spot in the West Coast Rose Bowl picture when they play Montana and Idaho, respectively, in a doubleheader at Los Angeles.

The doubleheader is in the important class only because of the games' bearing on the coast conference race and choice of the western representative to meet Georgia's Bulldogs in the New Year's day Rose Bowl classic.

UCLA, with a record of four wins and one defeat, has the best chance to overhaul top-ranked Washington State, which has a record of 5 wins, 1 loss and 1 tie. The Uclans have two games to go and by winning both can clinch the honors and a bid to the bowl. But one game, on Dec. 12, is with Southern California, which can, by beating Montana and UCLA finish in a tie for the laurels with Washington State.

Only one other game on the West Coast sends California against the powerful California Pre-flighters. Washington State junkets to San Antonio, Tex., to play the Texas Aggies.

Notre Dame with Great Lakes at Chicago is the top mid-western game. Great Lakes has won six in a row, including a 48-0 thumping of Northwestern.

Missouri's Big Six champions collide with Bernie Bierman's Iowa Pre-flighters at Kansas City and Oklahoma plays host to William and Mary's southern conference champions in the other western games.

In the south, Jacksonville naval air station plays Tulane, Mississippi State meets San Francisco and Rice play SMU.

EARLY TRADING PUTS LIST ON UNEVEN ROUTE

Westinghouse Included Among Stocks Showing Fractional Gains on Market.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The stock market moved over a slightly uneven route in today's early transactions.

At a quiet opening gainers of fractions included American Telephone, Westinghouse, Radio corporation, and North American. Small declines were posted for Baltimore and Ohio, Sears Roebuck, Union Carbide, International Harvester and United Aircraft.

Holders of steels noted the estimate of the American Iron & Steel Institute that stockpiles of scrap in the United States increased by more than 1,100,000 ons in April to Oct. 1 this year but the total was about 700,000 tons less than the amount on hand Jan. 1.

Marked optimists saw a constructive indicator in the compilation of the National Industrial conference board disclosing that 25 of the nation's largest manufacturing concerns had assets of approximately $12,700,000,000 at the end of 1941, topping the aggregate on the like date by some $2,000,000,000.

SIRENS TO CALL DEFENSE UNITS

Curb on Phone Use Between 7 and 7:30 P. M. Requested For Alert Sunday.

sible by eliminating personal use of phones during that period. "Any emergency call will be condoned, of course," Judge Kalbfleisch said.

Under the city's blackout ordinance the use of telephones except by specific defense agencies is forbidden, with drastic penalties provided for violations.

Workmen of the Ohio Public Service company and employes of the city under City Electrician Ernest Adams, hampered by rain and cold weather earlier in the week, are working extra hours to hang and connect all of the 10 air raid signal sirens which will have their first test tomorrow night.

Under the direction of Clarence Lisle the defense control center in the defense offices, third floor of City Hall, will be fully staffed Sunday evening with trained men and women and the telephone receiving stations and dispatching centers.

Tomorrow night's alert will launch a distribution to every home and residence in the Mansfield area of "Remember Pearl Harbor—and Buy Bonds" pledge cards, the all-clear signal sounding only after all zone leaders have reported their districts covered.

Monday's commemorative alert at 12.25 p. m. will be followed in two minutes by an all-clear signal which opens an afternoon of bond-buying at banks and other bond-selling depots where pledges will be surrendered.

The commemorative bond sale is under the direction of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, with the cooperation of the civilian defense council which will experience its first test mobilization Sunday night.

QUESTION PEACE OF ARMY-WLB

Legislators Say They'll Act, If Necessary, to Keep Civilian Control.

duction has been the fact that it signs the contracts. Experts have pointed out that as long as this policy is followed, producers are more apt to take orders from procurement officials of the service than from WPB or other civilian authorities.

Overall effect of the pact appeared to be that the army and navy recognized WPB authority over scheduling but the services continue to do most of it.

At the outset Nelson sought, primarily, to retrieve scheduling and other production powers. WPB officials, and legislators backing Nelson took the stand that a compromise was unthinkable; that it would sound the death knell for the civilian hold on economy and nothing short of a clear WPB victory would suffice.

It was suggested in some quarters that Nelson may have made a strategical retreat. It was pointed out that, if production lags, he then can demand complete WPB control—and will have a weapon to support it.

FDR Picks M'Nutt As Manpower Boss

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON President Roosevelt, it was learned today, has chosen Paul V. McNutt to head the new manpower setup with absolute authority over allotment of labor for military, industrial and farm needs.

At the same time, it was indicated that the chief executive would bring the selective service system under the war manpower commission, thus giving McNutt final authority over policies in the drafting of men for military service.

The White House was expected momentarily to announce the president's decision. In fact, highest sources reported that the decision would have been made public yesterday, except for the mechanical problem of drawing up and distributing the necessary executive orders.

U. S. Produces as Many Arms as All of Axis

NEW YORK — (UP) — American industry has reached a volume of combat armaments production as great as that of all the Axis powers put together but it was spurred on today by President Roosevelt to greater and greater achievements.

Mr. Roosevelt's message was read at the closing dinner of the war congress of American industry, sponsored by the National Association of Manufacturers last night just before Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the war production board, informed the industrialists that the United States alone is on a production parity with the Axis nations and that the United Nations together are turning out twice as much war goods as their enemies.

Mr. Roosevelt said America's tremendous industrial undertaking was "well along the way" and that it should reach its peak force next year.

"We have nevertheless been unable—in a year of actual war—to reach the full objectives of production which we must attain," he said. "Conversion has been almost miraculous but is still not complete."

Eugene Smart Studios and Shop Provide Complete Music Service

Tomorrow's Concert At O. S. R. Typical Of Studio Activity.

More than a quarter of a century of satisfying service to music lovers in North Central Ohio has earned for Smart's an enviable reputation in music circles in this section.

With the record department at 6 South Main street connecting directly with the familiar studio entrance at 5 Park avenue west, Eugene Smart, proprietor of the shop and studios, has expanded his business to include every possible need of musicians and music lover so that in Mansfield music circles the name "Smart" has come to be used synonymously with music.

Despite the fact that Smart has experienced no end of difficulty in procuring records this season, he has scoured the Cleveland market for discs in order that his record department might retain its reputation for variety and completeness. So that, even now, requests for all types and makes of records may be satisfied.

Private sound proof listening booths make the choosing of records at Smart's a happy experience.

And for Christmas giving, the record holders, cabinets and albums available here are new this year and make unusual gifts to family and friends.

Available in another department are band and orchestra instruments by such famous makers as Conn, Olds, Selmer, Martin and Gibson. All instrument supplies are stocked and factory repairs obtainable as a special service of the music shop.

Here too, can be found a wide selection of popular sheet music, standard classics and instruction books.

Smart's stock Kimball, Hallet-Davis and Musette pianos, each instrument with a distinguished reputation in the music world.

The Magnovox radio-phonograph is a featured instrument in the radio section where Zenith, Motorola and Emerson radios are displayed.

In close proximity to this complete music shop are the famous Smart Studios where instruction is noted for happy philosophy and "smart" musical technique. Countless performers now enjoying importance in the entertainment world are students of Smart Studios.

A. L. McConnell, one of the teachers at Smart's, recently was pianist with Johnny McGee of New York.

Timely part of studio activity is the annual Christmas concert which will be presented under the direction of Eugene Smart at 10 a. m. tomorrow at the Ohio State reformatory.

By special arrangement with Capt. Neale, band leader at the institution and with reformatory Chaplain Wappner, all inmates will attend the performance in the main auditorium.

This is one of many concerts that pupils of Smart Studios have presented at the reformatory during the past several years.

Featured guitarists this year will be Eldon Remy and Royal Beemiller. Those performing with electric Hawaiian guitars are Shirley Brigham, George Slicker, Ruth Bailey, Donald Victor and Raymond Kissel, accordianists are Beatrice Sanchez, Viola Meyers, Gordon Henry, Glenn Wendland, John Bauer and Shirley Lay; vocalists are Phemie Wright and Eileen Schuler; Shirley Boyd, marimba and ballet dance; Marjorie Ferguson, vibraharp; Shreffler sisters, Mary and Frances, tap dancing and accordion.

Culp Jewelers Show Gifts of Distinction

Christmas is a time for magnificent gestures. So if there's someone particularly deserving, why not plan the thrill of giving a gift of jewelry?

At Culp Brothers, 307-8 Richland Trust building, you will find just the jewel to provide this perfect gift. Diamonds, for instance, are not only glamour gifts but good investments as well when purchased from a reliable jeweler.

You will find at Culp's honest opinion and suggestion expressed in a way that will impress you with the dignity and reliability of the store and its policy.

Culps also do their own diamond setting, remounting and resetting. They carry in regular stock of varied mountings in yellow and white gold and platinum. They will do remountings while you wait. This service is provided by Earl J. Culp, skilled manufacturing jeweler and repairman.

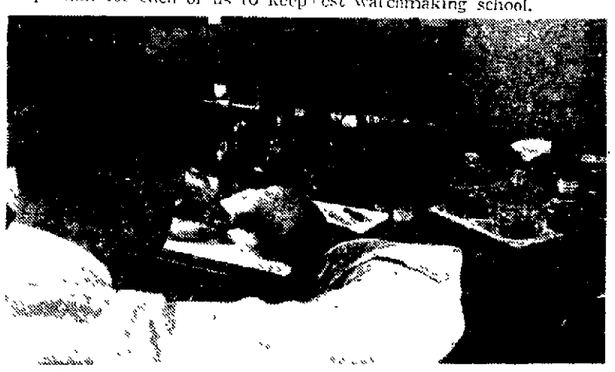
Now that watch manufacturers have turned their efforts to war production, it becomes increasingly important for each of us to keep the watches we have in good repair.

At Culps, you may be assured of the most painstaking care of your timepiece since this shop uses the same methods as leading watch factories. And service may be procured here without sending your watch out of town. This assures quicker service as well as more conscientious attention to your timepiece.

Culps are equipped to replace parts in any style watch, even to the point of manufacturing intricate parts. Because present day watches are of countless designs, they stock 1,288 different types of crystals and will fit any of these while you wait.

Dial and case refinishing is also a special service at Culps, so that a watch, when returned to the customer, looks and operates like new.

H. Eugene Culp, who is a skilled exponent of the watchmaker's art, was graduated from Bradley Polytechnic Institute, the world's finest watchmaking school.



H. Eugene Culp is shown in the accompanying photo at his work bench in the watch repair department at Culp Brothers Jewelry.
